Basically, I'm learning views, trying to get a grasp on how they work, and write my own (very basic) ones. I would like to create a view where I have a table with two columns: device_id (int) and stat (string). The device_id is the foreign key, and the stat is the value (that is assigned to that device_id). I have two tables, devices and stats. The issue I am running into is that when I try to create my view, I get an error message stating: FOREIGN KEY constraint "FK_device_stat_stat_devices" referenced: "devices" does not exist. My question is, what do I need to do to get this working? According to the error message, it seems to be looking for the 'devices' table. What's the connection with this? What exactly is the foreign key reference supposed to be? Are there other options I can use to accomplish this? Thanks! A: Two tables are involved here: device (table) contains a column device_id (int) which is the foreign key to the table stats. stats (table) has a column stat (string) Your "views" entity is not a table. It's another name for a view. So you're trying to create a view that
