Its GURU the name of the scammer who steals $50 out of your paypal account. History of the Scam. Another rumoured scam and i have seen this scam months back in early November 2012. It would be in 2013 which i first saw an user post the comment on a forum about this scam and how he got scammed of an amount of $50. I myself never bought the scam because i think it has high chances of success. I even asked my neighbour in which i am staying in (yep its Singapore, different country) to ask on his behalf if he have got any of this scam. I am very sure his answer is NO. He said that he didnt get even a single email on his account in all of 2012. So here is the history of the scam if you dont know. It has its origin back in to the days of paypal scam when people used to make a transaction by going in to a payment page to paypal and thats it. Here is where the scammer steps in. They advertise their "PRODUCT" on online trading portals like Idolo, Stockxchange and Ariba. The scammer pose as an honest seller with good product. So the buyer would go to the scammer, pay the money and gets the product or service. When the buyer

VisiCalc VisiCalc (also known as Visual Basic for Applications), is a general-purpose spreadsheet application similar to Lotus 1-2-3 and Quattro Pro. It was developed as an application for the Apple Macintosh in 1984 by Bill Watkins at Visicalc Systems, Inc. Watkins built his first version of VisiCalc on top of the Macintosh Toolbox's Basic interpreter and the Manatee Graphics Utility (MGU) software to allow it to run on the Apple Macintosh. He did so because he believed that such a product would be of interest to developers of other products. It was, and still is, the first spreadsheet program available for the Macintosh, predating Lotus 1-2-3 by a year. VisiCalc was originally distributed by Scaled Computing for $99 in January 1984. Watkin's version was called VisiCalc Pro, and it was priced at $495 in 1984. In May 1985 a Homebrew version was made available by Tim Bracewell. VisiCalc includes several financial functions, although they are intended more for computer programs than for use in accounting. The latest version adds support for Microsoft Excel and other spreadsheet applications. After the release of VisiCalc, Wang Laboratories licensed VisiCalc to customers including Apple, AT&T, Atlantic Data Systems, IBM, MOST, Microsoft, NCR, NeXT, Phoenix Data Systems, Psion, SGI, Sun Microsystems, Texas Instruments, and Xerox. VisiCalc was very popular among accounting professionals. It was a template for a new generation of spreadsheet programs that have since become standard in many businesses. VisiCalc has been ported to a variety of platforms including Microsoft Windows, IBM OS/2, Unix, OS/9, the SGI MIPS architecture, PDAs running Pocket PC operating system, and the Palm Pilot. A major desktop publishing program was developed for use with VisiCalc that supports PostScript page layout and Macintosh Preview. VisiCalc was installed on over 10,000 computers by the end of 1985. According to a report from The Wall Street Journal, within five years of its release, "more than 100 million copies have been sold—a number which has grown to over 150 million by 1998." Safari Safari, or the Web browser for Macintosh, is an example of a multi
